

The prefecture of Iwate in Japan, launches the promotion of the destination on the French market.

The prefecture of Iwate, located in the north of Japan, has chosen to entrust its representation to Interface Tourism, communication, public relations, social media and marketing agency specialized in the tourism sector, for its development and promotion on the French market.

As part of the launch and development of its tourism promotion activities on the French market, the Japanese prefecture of Iwate opens an office in Paris in order to introduce French tourists to the destination's main assets and continues to expand the Japanese representation in France.

Interface Tourism will implement a communication plan focused on trade & marketing, public and press relations, and on digital and social media in order to increase the destination's reputation on the French market.

The vast, mainly mountainous territory that makes up the region, is organized around Mount Iwate also known as Fuji Nanbu thanks to its likeness to Mount Fuji. The city of Morioka which is the capital, is nestled in the middle of this pastoral setting. The surrounding villages bear witness to the region's historic remains and in particular the UNESCO World Heritage town of Hiraizumi.

The destination offers a wide variety of landscapes and unspoiled nature that can be discovered in every season: cliffs plunging to the ocean, snow-capped mountains, beaches with turquoise water, caves and phosphorescent underground rivers.

The prefecture, which is one of the largest in the country, also has an important cultural and historical richness and an ancestral gastronomy recognized throughout the Japanese territory.

Following this opening, Blaise Borezée, Interface Tourism's General Manager, is delighted with this new collaboration: "We are delighted that Iwate has chosen to use our know-how in the promotion of foreign destinations and we are convinced that this Japanese region will seduce more than one French traveler thanks to its many assets: cultural, historical and natural".
